Necessarily diverse.

Because clients have different aims and needs

- Clients' areas of interest and preferred approaches vary
- Financial objectives vary
- No single option can meet all investors' needs

Because different fund strategies are intended to meet different aims

- Funds have different policies, aims, objectives - and intended clients
- Fund methods vary - with different approaches and points of reference (eg norms/own criteria/impact/allowable limits)
- Few issues are 'black and white' – different strategies are often complimentary
- Issues, aims, objectives and available information change over time

But needs to be understood in order to give appropriate advice

- Our 'SRI Styles' help users to recognise core SRI strategies - but be aware, fund strategies and aims vary within each group
- 'SRI Policies', 'SRI Features' and 'Corporate SRI Activity' filters help users identify individual fund aims, strategies, areas of crossover between the styles and related differentiators
- Text and links supplied by fund managers enable users to check which funds are 'ethically appropriate'
